

Gerlie has 20 years of diverse experience working with philanthropic and direct service nonprofit organizations. She currently serves as the grants and administration lead for the Panta Rhea Foundation, a grantmaking family foundation focused on supporting social justice, food policy, and climate change issues. Prior to Panta Rhea, she helped annually award between $20 to $15 million in grants to California-based arts organizations with the James Irvine Foundation, and communicated the needs and opportunities of philanthropy in Los Angeles County with the California Community Foundation. She also curated and designed arts programming at The Music Center, the Performing Arts Center of LA County, and The Pasadena Playhouse. She earned a master's in arts management from Claremont Graduate University, and a bachelor's in business administration from the University of San Francisco. With a passion for civic and community engagement, she currently serves as a City of Los Angeles Commissioner with the El Pueblo de Los Angeles Historical Monument, a board member of Visual Communications, and a founding board member of the Claremont Graduate University - Center for Business and Management in the Arts program's alumni chapter.